

SAILED THE SEAS 38 YEARS.

One of His Experiences.

For thirty-eight years Capt. Loud followed the sea, most of that time as master of a vessel, and upon retiring from the water was appointed by the Secretary of the United States Treasury to superintend the seal fisheries in Alaska, which position he held five years. He relates one experience as follows:

"For several years I had been troubled with general nervousness and pain in the region of my heart. My greatest affliction was sleeplessness; it was almost impossible at any time to obtain rest and sleep. Having seen Dr. Miles' remedies advertised I began using Nervine. After taking a small quantity the benefit received was so great that I was positively alarmed, thinking the remedy contained opiates which would finally be injurious to me; but on being assured by the druggist that it was perfectly harmless, I continued it together with the Heart Cure. Today I can conscientiously say that Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and Heart Cure did more for me than anything I had ever taken. I had been treated by eminent physicians in New York and San Francisco without benefit. I owe my present good health to the judicious use of these most valuable remedies, and heartily recommend them to all afflicted as I was."

—Capt. A. P. Loud, Hampden, Me.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and Heart Cure are sold by all druggists on a positive guarantee, or by Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind., on receipt of price, $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5, express prepaid. A free from all opiates and dangerous drugs.

THE MODERN WAY.

How a Patient, Old Fashioned Mother's Hopes, One by One, Were Dashed.

It is rather hard for people to live up to their children in these modern times, and the fin de siècle young woman with her up to date ideas is often a complete and not altogether agreeable surprise to her mother, whose domestic and social life has been running quietly in the same grooves for years, and who looks upon her emancipated offspring with much the same feeling that a matronly hen may be supposed to experience when her brood take suddenly to the water and prove to be ducklings. Mrs. N. is a friendly, social little woman, who, a few years ago, was wont to talk of how much she expected to enjoy herself when Lena, her eldest girl, should have grown up. "It will be so delightful to have one's own daughter as a congenial companion," was her constant cry, and she was forever longing for the time when the child should leave school and come home for good. Unfortunately, however, when Lena arrived at years of discretion, she discovered that her vocation was social reform, and she now spends her entire time in the down town slums organizing newsboys' clubs and starting free reading rooms.

"Most praiseworthy, of course, from a philanthropic point of view," said one of Mrs. N.'s friends, who was discussing the problem of the modern daughter and the old fashioned mamma, "but I do maintain it is hard on Elizabeth to be obliged to play second fiddle to a lot of dirty little boys, and I must say that I felt sorry for Professor N. when I happened to drop in the other day at his luncheon hour to discover that excellent man resignedly taking his chop in the lobby, while the house re-echoed to the shrill, nasal voices of 20 or more ragged gamins, who were rehearsing some songs for a festival in the dining room and parlor."

Disappointed in her eldest daughter, Mrs. N., with her usual hopefulness, remarked cheerfully: "We do not see as much as we would like of dear Lena. She is such a wonderful worker and has so many calls on her time that I tell her she must not bother about me. Edith is such a big girl now that I shall soon have her to go about with." But, alas for the frailty of human hopes, Edith had no sooner finished school than she announced her determination to go to college, and she has ever since been taking courses of higher mathematics and writing essays on the advanced education of women.

Again the admiring mother patiently bore her second disappointment, feeling sure that her third daughter at least would be likely to resemble her and find pleasure in the same occupations. "Hetty was such a pretty, lively little thing," she surely wouldn't be comfortably frivolous.

"My dear," exclaimed the friend who had been narrating Mrs. N.'s trials and tribulations, "Hetty was positively the worst of the lot. She developed a craze for art, and nothing would do but she must go to Paris and study, and now she has a 'culte' for Monet, is as impressionist of the most advanced school and goes in for dress reform. Poor, poor, dear Elizabeth! She cannot understand one of her daughters, who for their part are utterly incapable of sympathizing with their mother's simple aims and pleasures."—New York Tribune.

Summer Dressing.

"I have found," said a woman recently, "that the problem of summer dressing was satisfactorily solved since I have established a series of india silk dresses. I began two years ago with a handsome one dressily made. Last summer I got a second of good quality, but different design and made more plainly, and this summer I am supplementing the two with a cheaper one for morning and general wear. From now on I shall not need another cheap one, the good ones falling gradually from their high estate of 'best,' through 'second best' and down to 'common.' In these days of fancy blouses and bodices one or two light dressy affairs of that sort give me an elaborate wardrobe that is delightfully cool, is in good taste, and, best of all, at summer resorts needs no laundering. My best light gown is a white wash silk. No one admires the lovely lawns, dimities and mulls more than do I, but they are very expensive, because they must be fresh to be wearable, and the cost of keeping them in that condition is, as every one who tries it knows, very much in excess of the first price of the gown."

Women in English Pulpits.

It is becoming quite fashionable for ladies to occupy important congregational pulpits on Sunday. Twice recently a sister of the late Mr. Spurgeon preached to crowded congregations at the handsome church in Hampstead Road in connection with the service. She is very impressive in her manner and is not without personal resemblance to her late eminent brother, from whom, however, she differed, among other things, on the question of baptism. Again, a few Sundays back, Mrs. Lawson Forster, wife of the popular minister at Harecourt chapel, Canonbury, delivered an address instead of her husband, and Mrs. Vynwy Morgan's eloquent sermons at York Road have quite taken the hearts of the Lambeth people by storm.—London Tit-Bits.

Corks.

Corks may be made air and water tight by keeping them for five minutes under melted paraffin. They must be kept down with a wire screen. These corks have a perfectly smooth surface and may be introduced or drawn out easily and seal perfectly.—Good House-keeping.

Mrs. Louise Chandler Moulton writes to the Boston Transcript that she is opposed to equal suffrage because she regards the right to vote as implying the duty to vote and should therefore feel obliged to use the ballot if she had it.

NECKWEAR FOR WOMEN.

The illustration represents some of the newest neckwear for ladies. The right hand figure is an inimitable of black satin and white lace. That on the left is another, of black moiré and Russian lace. The lower center design is a jabot of point de gene. Above is a bow of striped grenadine and lace. At the top is a collar of cherry satin with white lace stole.

TOLD BY JOSEPH JEFFERSON.

Some Yarns He Recently Spun at the Authors' Club.

"Our chairman said something tonight about the lovely lack of jealousy among authors and its prevalence among my and allied professions. I must dissent from the line. Why, have you not all observed the harmony which prevailed among the operative stars whose season recently closed at the Metropolitan Opera House? [Laughter.] And then take it in my own profession. If an actor is discharged from a company, are there not always plenty of his fellow actors ready to take his part? [After a silence, laughter.]

"Preparation, to return to my text, is most essential in the players' profession. If we are not prepared, we cannot retrace, retract or repair. The speech once delivered cannot be recalled. You authors may correct and revise, the painter can scratch out and paint over, but how would it seem in me to pause after a speech on the stage, scratch my chin and say: 'That infection was not quite right. I will deliver that line again?'

"Possibly I may have paid too much attention to preparation in my profession. One critic has abused me frequently for that, and he laments that I leave nothing to chance. That worries him, but I assure him he is right. I never leave anything to chance.

"I will confess between ourselves that I did needlessly prepare for one occasion. Mr. Florence and I had been playing together in comedy, and when the time approached for our final appearance together Mr. Florence said, and it seemed reasonable to me, that as the audience would doubtless call us out and demand speeches at the conclusion of our last performance we should prepare something. So we did. We rehearsed it all very carefully. Mr. Florence was to be first taken by surprise, and overcoming his emotions make a farewell address, in which he was to refer to me. Then I was to be taken by surprise, but suppressing my swelling feelings I was to answer Mr. Florence and wind up the impromptu scene."

Mr. Jefferson paused, lifted his wineglass, put it back on the table and added: "But the audience did not call us out after that performance. [Laughter.] But that was no excuse for a mistake Florence made afterward. He was playing in what we call the New England circuit—Hartford, New Haven, etc. One night he was called out after the performance and said: 'This is a mark of approbation which peculiarly touches me. I know many of the men before me—know them personally. I played marbles with them under the shadow of the Hartford Baptist church, shared their boyhood joys and sorrows, and I assure you that I shall never forget this last act of kindness which you people of Hartford—'

"Just then a voice from the gallery interrupted him: 'This is New Haven, Mr. Florence.' [Laughter.]

Rescue—Marriage.

"The girl who was drowning shrieked wildly. Her voice was borne across the waves to the man on the beach.

It was a narrow escape. The strong man shuddered and wiped the beads of perspiration from his brow.

"Good heavens!" he said. "Another moment and then—"

MARRIAGE AND DIVORCE.

The greater portion of divorced people in France are between 40 and 50 years of age.

Aristotle said that the proper age for marriage was 37 for a man and 18 for a woman.

Twenty-two states forbid by law the marriage of stepchildren with their step-parents.

The minimum age fixed for marriage in Sparta was 30 for a man and 20 for a woman.

The decrease in the price of food during the last 60 years has not resulted in an increase in the proportion of marriages.

An Indiana applicant testified that "my wife would not walk with me on Sundays and pulled a tuft of hair out of my head."

The laws of most of our states appear to show that the responsibility for the marriage contract rests on the parties themselves.

In 20 years prior to 1886 the United Kingdom had 6,587 divorces; Russia, 21,978; France, 57,116; Germany, 93,818; all Europe, 258,533; the United States, 323,716.

Insurance statistics have shown that in England if the wife dies first the husband survives nine years, while if the husband dies first the wife survives 11 years.

In California a defendant husband was adjudged guilty of cruelty because he did not provide water at his house; neither would he repair the house to make it comfortable.

By Roman law a married man having three children was entitled to a better seat in the theater than less fortunate benedicts. A married man having 12 children was entitled to a robe of honor and a pension.

An honest Confession.

If we were asked the reason why "VIAMI" performs such wonderful cures, we would be honest, and say, "We don't know." Ask a scientist why an apple invariably falls downward, and he would say it was due to the law of Gravitation.

That is about all he could tell you. It is no more natural for bodies to gravitate toward the center of the earth than it is for "VIAMI" to cure the diseases peculiar to women. It is not a drug, but a food, which nourishes and strengthens the affected parts, thereby enabling nature to throw off the disease. Our Health Book sent free.
